Mom Charged with Buying Pa. Teen Weapons
Dillon Cossey, 14, is lead in shackles into the courtroom at the Montgomery County Courthouse for his hearing in Norristown, Pa. Friday, Oct. 12, 2007. Cossey was charged as a juvenile with solicitation to commit terror and other counts. Authorities say the teenager had a cache of guns, knives and explosive devices in his bedroom for a possible school attack. (AP photo)

The Nature of Violence

- There is not a single variable capable of predicting violence
- That is, the more traits or behaviors a person has, the greater the probability that they may act violently
- The best predictor of future behavior is past behavior

Unaddressed disruptive behaviors will either continue and/or increase

The Nature of Violence continued...

- > Violence often results from frustration
- > Violence many times results from a breakdown in communications
- > Conflicting parties usually feel threatened and therefore feel compelled to protect their positions at all costs
- > The key is to identify the source of the frustration and open a line of communication

5 Characteristics of Mass Killers

- > Long history of frustration, failure and a diminished ability to cope with life's disappointments
- > Externalizes blame
- > Lack of emotional support from family and friends
- > Suffer a precipitating event they view as catastrophic
- > Access to a weapon powerful enough to satisfy need for revenge

STUDY OF ACTIVE SHOOTER INCIDENTS

- > Single shooter with more than one firearm
- > Daylight hours
- > In a building
- > Well populated location
- > Shooting over in 2 to 3 minutes
- > Initially target specific people
- > If targeted people unavailable or killed, will target people at random
- > Will likely take own life
